The Jessup Grain Drill Improved and Made by

R. J. RICHARDSON.

THE satisfiction which the Richardson Drill gave in 1862 has induced me to Make Double the Number for 1863. The principle of the Drill is all that was at first claimed for it. The experience of 1802 enables me to make them just

Adapted to the Peculiarities of this Soil, which is very diment to till.

More than three hundred of these delle were used in this vicinity last spring, and it is universally conceded that the Richardson Drill is

PERFECTLY ACCURATE

In the quantity of End Such per Acre, and that it is easily adjusted to any quantity desired. It is also con-ceded that the Richardson Drill is the Lightest Braft and the Rusiest for the Team of any Drill yet introduced.

The drills of 1863 are readily changeable from double to single rank. The points are longer, sharper and heavier than those of 1862, which render them better adopted to the bard and crusty soil of early fall plowing. Notwithstanding the

Large Advance on Material we have concluded to effer our drills at the SAME PRICE as in 1862, which is as follows: 9 tooth, $70: 10 tooth, $75: 11 tooth, $30: 12 tooth, $36: 18 tooth, $90.

To these who know the Riemardson Drill it is needless to say anything. Of these who do not know them, we would ask an examination, and refer to any one who as used them. Our drills are now.

READY FOR EXHIBITION! They are made at the well known

Rock River Iron Works of Harris, Guild, Angel & Tyler. The character of their work is well known. I would like averybody to examine these drills.

To those wishing to purchase drills, I would say that I guarantee their Working to the Entire Satisfaction of the purchaser, or No Sale.

The Corn Planter Attachment to the Richardson Drill will plant corn In Hills Accurately and any distance apart, from two to five feet, and two or three rows at onco.

Mr. W. H. Reed, of La Prairie, used one of the Richardson Twelve Tooth Drillsto Plant Over 50 Acres of Corn

In Paris the sympathy for Poland wasso great that the Russian embassador called on the French government to prevent its expression. The Swedish Diet has also avowed its sympathy for Poland; and the liberal representatives in the Italian parliament and the domocratic Italian associations have also warmly esponsed her cause.

All this was to be expected. No people ever had a clearer title to national indesendence, nor has any other people ever made to that end greater and nobler agerifices. But entirely unexpected, with regard to the Polish insurrection, is the attitude assumed by the Austrian government.
Reports from all sides agree that Russia is greatly dissatisfied with the attitude of Austria. It is said that Austria has allowed enlistments for the Polish insurgents to take place in Galicia, at Lemberg, in Uracow, and several towns and villages on the Austro-Russian frontier, and that the Austrian press is not prevented from expressing warm sympathy with Polund. A paper of Frankfort, which is usually well in made to that end greater and nobler excrifices. But entirely unexpected, with regard to the Polish insurrection, is the attiper of Frankfort, which is usually well in formed about Austrian affairs, affirms that Austria rejects any solidarity with Prussia

The designs of Austria in parsning such policy can easily be guessed. No greater danger to her very existence has yet arisen than the Panslavic movement, whose aim it is to unite all Slavic tribes under the leadership of Russin. A plurality of the polyglot population of Austria are Slavi, and the success of the Panslavic movement in the interest of Russia would be at once the fatal blow to Austria. No wonder that Austria should venture an attempt to turn the intended blow against Russia. She has under her scopter the large majority of all Catholic Slavi, and revolutionary as the idea is, she may have been or she may be tempted to an effort to encourage the hostility of the Catholic Poles to Russia, and in general to outbid the latter power in offers to the Slavic nationality.

The government of Prussia assumes quite arisen than the Panslavic movement, whose

The government of Prussia assumes quite another attitude. In that country the progressive party has acquired of late a greater strength than in any other country of Europe. The government has good reason to fear lest an electric spark kindle the indignation of the people into a flame of open revolution. No one can, therefore, be surprised to learn that on February 8 a treaty was concluded between Prussic and Russia whereby Prussia is said to engage herself to march, troops into Russian Poland in case the insurrection should assume greater proportions or not reach a speedy termination. This, undoubtedly, may threaten the Poles with a new danger. But it also may, on the other hand, hasten a revolutionary outbreak in Prussia. The representatives of the Prussian people will never grant the expenses of a war against the Poles, and a new and most serious conflict would be at once brought on between the King and the representatives of the people. It will thus be seen that the complications in Eastern Europe are of a nature that may lead at any moment to most important developments .- N. I. Tribunc.

Col. Granville Moody, 74th Ohio, made speech at the celebration of Washington's Birthday, at Springfield, Ohio. Col. Moody said (Springfield Republic's report): 4. The Jessup Grain Drill! Improved and Made by

R. J. RICHARDSON.

THE satisfaction which the Richardson Drill gave in 1862 has induced for to Make Bouble the Number for 1863. The principle of the Drill is all that was at first claimed for it. The experience of 1882 enables me to make them just

Adapted to the Peculiarities of this Soil, which is very difficult to till. More than three hundred of these drills were used in this vicinity last spring, and it is universally conceded that the Richardson Drill is in the quantity of Seed Sown per Acre, and that it is easily adjusted to any quantity desired. It is also conceded that the Richardson Prill is the

Lightest Draft and the Rasiest for the Team

of any Drill yet introduced.

The draits of 1869 are readily changeable from double to singer rank. The points are longer, sharper and heavier than those of 1882, which render them better adopted to the bind and crusty soil of early fall picwing.

Not withstanding the Large Advance on Material we have concluded to offer our drills at the SAMEPRICE as in 1862, which is as follows: 9 tooth, $70; 10 tooth, $75; 11 tooth, $80; 12 tooth, $85; 13 tooth, $90. To those who know the Richardson Drill it is needless to say anything. Of those who do not know them, would sek an examination, and refer to any one who has used them. Our drills are now.

The last news received from the sent of var in Poland is more favorable to the Poles than was anticipated. Large numbers of insurgents begin to concentrate in a few places. Several defeats of the Russians are reported, and even the official Journal of St. Petersburg, of February 13, (the day before the leaving of the Africa) acknowledges the occupation by 2,000 in-surgents of the town of Dibienka, upon the frontier of the government of Lublin,-Prominent among the leaders of the move-ment is Gen. Langiewicz, who, according to a dispatch from Liemberg, also dated Feb. 13, was at the head of 5,000 insurgents and had retaken from the Russians the town of Wuschock.

The progressive party of Europe, although many considered an outbreek at this time unwise, because destitute of a fair prospect of success, feel and express the warmest sympathy with the righteousness of the cause for which Poland is sighting. The two grand masters of European liberalism, Garibaldi and Victor Hugo, have both hastened to lend the Poles the powerful support of their influence. Garibaldi has called on the English people to proffer aid to the Poles in this struggle for independence of their country and for liberty. Vicor Hugo has published an address to the Russian soldiers, calling on them with his wonted eloquence not to consummate the ssassination of Polend, and not to fallwhich he says appears impossible—even lower than the gangs of the southern states of America, raising against them the exe-cration of the whole civilized world. In Paris the sympathy for Poland was so great that the Russian embassador called on the French government to prevent its expression. The Swedish Diet has also avowed its sympathy for Poland: and the liberal representatives in the Italian parliament and the domocratic Italian associations have also warmly espoused her cause. All this was to be expected. No people ever had a clearer title to national indepandence, nor has any other people ever made to that end greater and nobler sac-rifices. But entirely unexpected, with re-gard to the Polish insurrection, is the attitude assumed by the Austrian government. Reports from all sides agree that Russia is greatly dissatisfied with the attitude of Aus tria. It is said that Austria has allowed enlistments for the Polish insurgents to ake place in Galicia, at Lemberg, in Cracow, and several towns and villages on the Austro-Russian frontier, and that the Austrian press is not prevented from expressing warm sympathy with Poland. A paper of Frankfort, which is usually well informed about Austrian affairs, affirms that Austria rejects any solidarity with Prussia and Russia in the question of Poland, and that the Austrian generals will not take part in the conferences which are to be held at Warsaw between the Prussian and Russian generals. It is even reported that Russia and Prussia accuse Austria of encouraging the insurrection.

The designs of Austria in pursuing such a policy can easily be guessed. No greater danger to her very existence has yet arisen than the Panslavic movement, whose aim it is to unite all Slavic tribes under the leadership of Russia. A plurality of the polyglot population of Austria are Slavi, and the success of the Panslavic movement in the interest of Russia would be at once the fatal blow to Austria. No wonder that Austria should venture an attempt to turn the intended blow against Russia. She has under her scepter the lerge majority of all Catholic Slavi, and revolutionary as the idea is, she may have been or she may be tempted to an effort to encourage the hos-tility of the Catholic Poles to Russia, and n general to outbid the latter power in offers to the Slavic nationality.

The government of Prussis assumes quite another attitude. In that country the progressive party has acquired of late a greater strength than in any other country of Europe. The government has good reason to fear lest an electric spark kindle the indignation of the people into a fiame of open revolution. No one can, therefore, be surprised to learn that on February 8 a treaty was concluded between Prussia and Russia whereby Prussia is said to engage herself to march troops into Russian Po land in case the insurrection should assume greater proportions or not reach a speedy termination. This, undoubtedly, may threaten the Poles with a new danger. But t also may, on the other hand, haston a revolutionary outbreak in Prussia. The representatives of the Prussian people will never grant the expenses of a war against the Poles, and a new and most serious confiict would be at once brought on between the King and the representatives of the people. It will thus be seen that the complications in Eastern Europe are of a nature that may lead at any moment to most important developments.—N. Y. Tribunc. Col. Granville Moody, 74th Ohio, made speech at the celebration of Washington's Birthday, at Springfield, Ohio. Col. Moody and (Springfield Republic's report):

"Our rebel foes spurned the ballot and chose the bullet, and bullets they shall have.
[Applause.] They have appealed to Cæsar, and to Cæsar they shall go. They will only settle this case in the court of Mars, and there we will meet them from term to term, and cast them, too, and leave them the costs to pay. [Enthusiastic Forever float that standard sheet-Where breather the foe but falls before us With Freedom's soil beneath our feet, And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us! A Political Pilgrimage.

Judge Cothrén is to make a political pilgrimage of the state. The Madison Patriot says :

We are authorized to announce that Hon. Montgomery M. Cothren, democratic can didute for chief justice, will visit Madison some time during the next week. Judge Cothren, we also understand, has consented, at the solicitation of numerous friends, to pay a brief visit to some of the principal cities and villages in the eastern part of the state. He desires to meet his tellow-citizenn in a familiar manner, and to avoid public speaking. The limited time at his disposal will compel the Judge to confine his visit to the railroad routes of the state. In the object he has to accomplish, the

"ayoidauce of public apeaking " is a political precaution. The "familiar manner" proposed to be adopted will work admirably in adapting himself to the disagreeing sentiments he will meet. "All things to all en. Copperhead and loyalist is to be made to believe that the itinerating candidate belongs to his class. The open declarations of Moses M. Strong and Sat. Clark the gale increased; black, heavy clouds in the convention which nominated him are to be explained away to the distrustful voter by the personal assurance of the of fice-seeking traveler, while the closet communications with the faithful are to confirm the public pledges of his spousers in the convention.

But what kind of an idea does this politcal pilgrimage convey to the man who has some old fushioned notions of judicial dignity and propriety? More Comfort for the Copperheads.

A faithful and intelligent soldier, writing to a friend in this city, from Major General McCook's headquarters, near Murfreesboro, Tennessee, under date of Feb. 26th, says: "We hear with unfeigued joy of the pas-heartily hope and pray that it may be rigidare thousands of able bodied men at home who are either too cowardly or too treacherous to fight for the government. We would like to see these men forced into the field, the turret, and looked out upon the cheerand compelled to fight for that government which has always protected them. If there i be anything which we dispise and loathe, it is that cless of persons in the loyal states commonly known as copperheads. The rebel who takes his gun and fights us holdly, we respect, for his brute courage; but the one who, under the garb of a peace secker, strives to embarrass the government, by trying to depreciate its currency, against fearful odds, but still holding his by continually carping about its policy, by ground. We who watched, when the blow trying to prevent volunteering, harboring came which made the strong man reel and deserters, and trying to encourage men to to that class of double-damned traitors, that when we have conquered the more noble nebels in the bloody strife, we will pay our respects to them in some suitable manner. Let them keep quiet. If the armed rebel deserves death for his treason, the peace rebel at home in the north doubly deserves the same fate. You will not understand by this that we do not want an honorable peace. That we much desire to see. But never, while the blood courses our veins, do we wish to see any peace save that which comes from the subjugation of the rebels. # # # # How do you like the President's proclamation? I think we will never have permanent peace until the curse of elavery is wiped out. "I am decidedly in favor of arming and using the able-bodied blacks. There is no longer any doubt as to their courage and fitness for soldiers. The fact of their cour age is well established by the history of the seige of Yorktown, the wars in Europe and Africa, and the late expeditions of colored troops in Florida and Louisiana. I do sincerely hope that our people will not spurp the aid which is thus offered them. Yours most truly,

SHIPWRECK OF THE IROX=CLAD, The Last Craise of the Menters-Full and Graphic Account of the Dis-

The Atlantic Monthly for March publishes a full account of the loss of the pioneer of our fron clad shi is, under the caption of of balling-only those leaving, and in the The Last Cruise of the Monitor." It is the only complete and graphic recital of that disaster that has been put in print, and we extract its more interesting portions. The Monitor, it will be remembered, start ed for the southern coast in convoy of the Rhode Island. The Passaic, a vessel of the same construction, but much larger and the iron deck, a wild throwing up of arms, moving troops. The Tycoon brings Memstronger, made the trip at the same time. Immediately upon gaining the open sea, the wind freshened, and the little Monitor began her labors. The writer thus delessly out of reach, rising and falling on | scribes the progress: " During the night we passed Cape Henry, and now, at dawn, found ourselves on ing and afternoon passed quietly; we speat most of our time on deck, on account of the confined air below, and, being on a lev el with the sea, with the spray dashing over us occasionally, amused ourselves with noting its shifting hues and forms, from the deep green of the first long roll to the foam creat and prisms ic tinta of the falling

"As the afternoon advanced, the freshing wind, the thickening clouds, and the increasing roll of the sea gave those most accustomed to ship-life, some new experiences. The little vessel plunged through the rising waves, instead of riding them. and, as they increased in violence, lay, as it were, under their crests, which washed over her continually, so that, even when we considered ourselves safe, the appearance was that of a vessel sinking.

"'I'd rather go to sea in a diving boil!" said one, as the waves dashed over the pilot house, and the little craft seemed buried in water. " Give me an oyster seow!' cried another, 'anything, only let it be wood, and something that will float over, instead of strong arms fought against it: under water!' "Still she plunged on, and about 6:30 p. m. we made Cape Hatteras."

It was here discovered that the Passaid had been left far astern, and the Monitor men" is a rule whose power is not yet brok- | was awarded the credit of being the first | iron-clad to pass Cape Hatterns. But her troubles were thickening; "At half past seven a heavy shower fell, lasting about twenty minutes. At this time covered the sky, through which the moon glimmered fitfully, allowing us to see in the distance a long line of white, plunging form, rushing towards us, sure indications, to a sailor's eye, of a stormy time. "A gloom hung over everything; the banks of clouds seemed to settle around us; the moan of the ocean grew louder and more fearful. Still our boat pushed dog gedly on; victorious through all, we thought that here, too, she would connuer, though the besting waves sent shudders through her whole frame. Bearing still the marks of one of the fiercest battles of the war, we had grown to think her involperable to any assault of man or element, and as she breasted these huge waves. plunging through one only to meet another more mighty, we thought, 'She is staunch, abe will wentber it." "An hour passed; the air below, which had all day been increasing in closeness, was now almost stifling, but our men lost sage of a conscription act. We do most no courage. Some sang as they worked, and the cadence of the voices. In ly enforced. We are well aware that there | with the rear of waters, sounded like a defiance to Ocean." The jumates of the brave little ship began to appreciate their paril. Those who were unemployed gathered on the top of less storm. The officers held a consultation, to devise means of relief. "The sea, like the old world glant, gathered force from each attack. Thick and fast came the blows on the iron mail of the Monitor, and still the brave little vessel hold her own, until at half-past eight, the engineer, Waters, faithful to the end, reported a leak. The pumps were instantly set in motion, and we watched their progress with intense interest. She had seemed to us like an old time knight in armor, battling the life-blood spout, felt our hearts faint within us; then again ground was gained desert, we have no respect at all. We say and the fight went on, the water lowering comewhat under the laboring pumps.

" From ning to ten it kept pace with them. From ten to eleven the sea increased in vio lence, the waves now dashing entirely over the turret, blinding the eyes and causing quick catchings of the breath as they swept against us. At ten the engineer had reported the leak as gaining on us; at half past ton, with several pumps in constant motion, one of which threw out three thousand gallons a minute, the water was rising of Wednesday to the business, and ran a rapidly and nearing the fires. When these were reached, the vessel's doon was sealed: for with their extinction the pumps must cease, and all hope of keeping the Monitor above water more than an hour or two exby the Rhode Island, whose brave men prepared at once to lower bons, though, in but wild sea, it was almost madness. "The Monitor had been attached to the Rhode Island by two hawaers, one of which had parted at shout 7 p. m. The other remained firm, but now it was necessary it should be cut. How was that possible whon every wave washed clean over her deck? What man could reach it alive? "Who'll cut the bawser ?" shouted Capt. Bankhead. Acting Master Stodder volunteered, and was followed by another. Holding by one The Sorghum Convention .- This body hand to the ropes at her side, they cut through, by many blows of the hatchet, the immense rope which united the vessels. Stodder returned safely, but his brave comed president; C. W. Murfeldt, of Rockford, panion was washed over and went down.

for few thought she could live to reach us. She neared; we are sure of her, thank God I objects, it ought to be made, for when the " In this interval the cut hawser had become entangled in the paddle wheel of the Rhode Island, and she drifted down upon us; we, not knowing this fact, supposed her coming to our assistance; but a moment undeceived us. The launch sent for our relief was now between us and her,too near for safety. The steamer bore swiftly down, storn first, upon our starboard quarter. 'Keep off ! keep off !' we cried, and then first saw she was helpless. Even as we looked, the devoted boat was caught between the steamer and the ironclad-a sharp sound of crushing wood was | tion of the government that slavery might heard—thwarts, oars, and splinters flew in the air-the beat's crow leaped to the Monwas a bill to pay a third, or extra mileage itor's deck. "There was no hasty scramble for life when it was found she floated; all held back. The men kept steadily on their work order named, whom the captain bade save themselves. They descended from the turret to the deck with mingled fear and hope, for the waves tore from side to side and the coolest head and bravest heart could not guarantee safety. Some were washed over as they left the turret, and with a clutch at went down, their death-cry ringing in the ears of their companions. "The boat sometimes held her place by from Lake Providence. Making one final effort, he threw his body forward as he fell, striking across the boat's side so violently it was thought some of his ribs must be broken. Stout sailorarms pulled him in, one more sprang to a place in her, and the boat, now full, pushed off, in a sinking condition it is true, but still bearing hope with her, for she was

It seemed a hopoless task to attempt reaching the Rhode Island in so small a hout, but it often proves true that a tiny craft will ride the waves when a larger one goes down. The storm was unabated, but

"Over the waves we toiled slowly, pulling for life. The men stuffed their pensekets into the holes in her side, and bailed incessantly. We neared the Rhode Is land; but now a new peril appeared. Right down upon our centre, borne by the might of rushing water, came the whole bout sent to rescue others from the ironclad. We barely floated; if she struck us with her bows full on us, we must go to the bottom. One sprang, and, as she neared, with outstretched arms, met and turned her course. She presed against us, and his hand, caught between the two, was crushed, and the arm, wrenched from its socket, fell a helpless weight at his side; but life remained. We were saved, and an arm was a small price to pay for life.

"We reached the Rhode Island; ropes were thing over her side, and caught with a death-grip. Some lost their hold, were washed away, and again dragged in by the boat's craw. " In the mean time the whale boat, nearly our destruction, had reached the side of the Monitor, and now the Captain said, 'It is madness to remain here longer; let each man save himself.' For a moment he descended to the cabin for a coat, and his faithful servant followed to secure a jewel box, containing the accumulated treasure of years. A sad sorry sight it was. In the heavy air the lamps burned dimly, and the water, waist deep, splashed sullenly against the wardroom's sides. One lingering look, and he left the Monitor's cabin forever-"Time was precious; he hastened to the Lieutenant Greene nobly held his post. "One by one, watching their time between the waves, the men filled in, and at last, after all effort for others and none for themselves, Captain Bankhead and Lieut. Greene took their places in the boat. Two or three still remained, clinging to the turret; the captain had begged them to come down, but, paralyzed with fear, they sat immovable, and the gallant Brown, promising to return for them, pushed off, and soon had his boat load safe upon the Rhode Island's deck.

At last Capt. Brown appeared, announcing that his ship was board, and succeeded in placing him safely sinking and surrendered. The boat was ordered ashore, and she was landed. All of the crew were taken but one man, who jumped upon land and made his way to the federal lines, and made known the catastrophe. The action lasted fifteen minutes. Since the loss of the Indianola the Frolic, in charge of Major Hays, asked permission to approach Vicksburg with prisoners for exchange. He stated that the Indianola was sunk, but many seeined to doubt the statement, thinking it only a ruse, and that the Indianola and Queen may yet be used against us. When the last boat came up from Young's Point the Queen of the West was lying under the guns of the confederate battery at Warrenton, below Vicksburg.

The West Wind and Sunshine had arrived with dredges, to be used on the canal.

The river was rising but all was quiet on ita banka. The flat boat sent down the canal was ared upon by the batteries, and although it arrived at the end it sunk from shot holes. A canal barge with propeller had got into Lake Pravidence from the Mississippi. It, was pushed overland on sliden; to be used in exploring the lake and neighboring bayous, and assisting in the progress of the canal at Lake Providence. A few days after independence war, declared in the double hot summer of 1776 a rookery stood by the wayeide in an old town of the east. It had two rooms. In one room a woman lay weak and sick. She had become a mother to a child, a male baby. It had no life, or seemed to have none; the doctor, worthy and shrewd man, hit it a slap on the back and knocked breath into it, and laid it full of life on the three-legged wooden stool. Then came a front of the Gazette office in Hanover Square; a young man was in the crowdpale, thin but intelligent. He walks mugrocery; he owns it; he has one clerk, whose name is John : over the door is a sign : read it-"S. Whitney." The owner is a middle aged man; he is 30 years of age, he is married—has children. "John, su gar must rise; I have bought it in time, and my note is as good as gold, all that is in first hands in the market. Be quiet, John -be calm." Ere a month passed, augar commenced going up-Napolcou's wars were long ones-until that long head-the same that was on the stool where he uttered his first cry-the same that had landed ragged, almost a hatless and helpless boy, in New York-the grocer well-to-do in the world-the sugar speculator on war news. has cleared his hundred thousand dollars ! Every body knew it-New York was a small city then—it was 1809. CHAPTER IV.

Then grocer, Whitney, was doing a tremendous business; he had erected a large store in Front street between Old and Coenties Slips. What a comic grocer! He had invested $50,000 in real catate in 1809-in houses that paid rent. He had sold goods to the southen people; he agreed to take cotton rated at five or six cents per pound; and S. Whitney, our comic grover, was deemed a good accommodating man to receive it at those prices? War closed-cot ton went up to seventeen cents. Fifty dol lars a bale was what Whitney made, and he had in his Front street store 8,000 balesonly $10,000-cleared by our hero man, at one dash! How the cash, the bank notes, went into real estate, into houses, stores; farms up on the Island, Acres upon acres became his. He economized, starved himself, refused to let his boys spend money-why should they? "It my boys spend it, it is gone, and the interest is gone too; while if I save it to invest, it is eggs batching, chickens growing and layng eggs to hatch avain. Eleven more years are passed. Our comic man is a millionaire, yot he is the taked baby that cried only when the doc or knocked breath into its little puny body as it lay on the three cornered wooden stool-the same prudent boy that munched bread in Old Slip, with a swallow-tailed coat and napless hat. He is the grocer of years ago-the comic man who took cotton for debts of money due him. It is the rich millionaire, Stephen Whitney, who every hody bows to, who is received with smiles when he goes on 'Change, and is permitted to frown himself. The year in 1820. CHAPTER F. The great millionaire is sought after by all who have projects in their liends but no money in their pockets. He, too, has a weakness. He has been a grocer-he de sires to be a large shipping merchant. Old Bobby Kermit determines to accommodate him. Kermit has a line of packets to Liverpool in his brain. He owns one ship, a saint ship, the "St. George." What New Yorker does not remember him? He coaxes in Stephen Whitney to build the "St Andrew," another ship, that cost alone $107,000. Stephen own; the largest share of a dozen ships. He has mortgages on others. He coins money. His boys bother him. Why should they be so anxious to spend money, when he can invest money every hour of his life so judiciously, and where it shall pay such good interest? He is an injured father. He wont stand it. He has just invested a million in the New Jersey transportation and ferry boot stock. and needs all his money. What a comic man? What a comic biography, his work! Yet, he is the same hig lot of clay that was once that little baby that had not breath and lay naked on a three-cornered wooden stool, when the doctor hit baby on the back and knocked breath into him. . Judge Cothren is to make a political pilgrimage of the state. The Madison Pat-

We are authorized to announce that Hon. Montgomery M. Cothren, democratic can didate for chief justice, will visit Madison some time during the next week. Judge Cothren, we also understand, has consented, at the solicitation of numerous friends, to pay a brief visit to some of the principal cities and villages in the eastern part of the state. He desires to meet his fellow-citizens in a familiar manner, and to avoid public speaking. The limited time at his disposal will compel the judge to confine his visit to the railroad routes of the state.

In the object he has to accomplish, the "avoidance of public speaking" is a political precaution. The "familiar manner" proposed to be adopted will work admirably in adapting himself to the disagreeing sentimenta he will meet. "All things to all men" is a rule whose power is not yet broken. Copperhead and loyalist is to be made to believe that the itinerating candidate belongs to his class. The open declarations of Moses M. Strong and Sat. Clark in the convention which nominated him in the convention which nominated him glimmered fitfally, allowing us to see in the distance a long line of white, planging voter by the personal assurance of the of fice-seeking traveler, while the closet communications with the faithful are to confirm the public pladges of his sponsers in the convention.

But what kind of an idea does this politcal pilgrimage convey to the man who has some old fashioned notions of judicial dignity and propriety?

More Comfort for the Copperhends.

A faithful and intelligent soldier, writing to a friend in this city, from Major General McCook's headquarters, near Murfreesboro, Tennessee, under date of Feb. 26th, says We hear with unfeigned joy of the pas-

ly enforced. We are well aware that there are thousands of able bodied men at home who are either too cowardly or too treacherous to fight for the government. We would like to see these men forced into the field, and compelled to fight for that government which has always protected them. If there be anything which we dispise and loathe, it is that class of persons in the loyal states fast came the blows on the iron mail of the commonly known as copperheads. The rebel who takes his gun and fights us boldthe one who, under the garb of a peace seeker, strives to embarrass the government, by trying to depreciate its currency, against fearful odds, but still holding his by continually carping about its policy, by ground. We who watched, when the blow trying to prevent volunteering, harboring came which made the strong man reel and deserters, and trying to encourage men to within us; then again ground was gained, desert, we have no respect at all. We say and the fight went on, the water lowering deserters, and trying to encourage men to to that class of double-damned traitors, that somewhat under the laboring purchas. when we have conquered the more noble rebels in the bloody strife, we will pay our respects to them in some suitable manner. Let them keep quiet. If the armed rebel the same fate. You will not understand peace. That we much desire to see. But rapidly and nearing the fires. never, while the blood courses our weins, do we wish to see any peace save that which comes from the subjugation of the rebels. * * * How do you like the pire. President's proclamation? I think we will never have permanent peace until the curse of slavery is wiped out.

"I am decidedly in favor of arming and using the able-bodied blacks. There is no by the Rhode Island, whose brave men pre longer any doubt as to their courage and pared at once to lower bosss, though, in fitness for soldiers. The fact of their cour age is well established by the history of the Rhode Island by two hawsers, one of which seige of Yorktown, the wars in Europe and Africa, and the late expeditions of colored troops in Florids and Louisians. I do sincerely hope that our people will not apura the aid which is thus offered them. Yours most truly,

Immediately upon gaining the open sea, the wind freshened, and the little Monitor began her labors. The writer thus de-

It was here discovered that the Passaic had been left for astern, and the Mountor was awarded the credit of being the first iron-clad to pass Cape Hatterns. But her croubles were thickening: "At half past seven a heavy shower fell, iasting about twenty minutes. At this time the gale increased; black, heavy clouds covered the sky, through which the moon to a sailor's eye, of a stormy time.

The iumates of the brave little ship be gan to appreciate their peril. Those who were unemployed gathered on the top of the turret, and looked out upon the cheerless storm. The officers held a consulta-

What man could reach it alive? "Who'll cut the bawser?" shouted Capt. Baukhead. Acting Master Stodder volunteered, and was followed by another. Ho ding by one hand to the ropes at her side, they cut through, by many blows of the hatchet, the mmense rope which united the vessels. Stodder returned safely, but his brave companion was washed over and went down.

"Meanwhile the boat launched from the Rhode Island, had started, manned by a crew of picked men.
"We watched her with straining eyes for few thought she could live to reach us. She neared; we are sure of her, thank God! " In this interval the cut hawser had become entangled in the paddle wheel of the Rhede Island, and she drifted down upon us; we, not knowing this fact, supposed her coming to our assistance; but a mo-ment undeceived us. The launch sent for our relief was now between us and her,too near for safety. The steamer bore swiftly down, stern first, upon our star-board quarter. 'Keep off! keep off!' we cried, and then first saw she was helpless. Even as we looked, the devoted boat was caught between the steamer and the ironclad-a sharp sound of crushing wood was heard-thwarts, oars, and splinters flew in the air—the boat's crew leaped to the Mon-itor's deck. Death stared them in the face; our iron prow must go through the Rhode Island's side, and then an end to all. One awful moment we held our breath-then the hawser was cleared—the steamer mov-

It seemed a hopeless task to attempt reaching the Rhode Island in so small boat, but it often proves true that a tiny eraft will ride the waves when a larger one goes down. The storm was unabated, but strong arms fought against it:

" In the mean time the whale boat, near y our destruction, had reached the side of the Monitor, and now the Captain said, 'It is madness to remain here longer; let each man save himself.' For a moment he descended to the cabin for a cout, and his faithful servant followed to secure a jewel bex, containing the accumulated treasure of years. A sad sorry sight it was. In the heavy air the lamps burned dim'y, and the water, waist deep, splashed sullenly against the wardroom's sides. One lingering look, and he left the Monitor's cabin forever.

"Time was precious; he hastened to the deck, where in the midst of a terrible sea, Lieutenant Greene nobly held his post. "One by one, watching their time be tween the waves, the men filled in, and at last, after all effort for others and none for themselves, Captain Bankhead and Lieut. Greene took their places in the boat. Two or three still remained, clinging to the turret; the captain had begged them to come down, but, paralyzed with fear, they sat immovable, and the gallant Brown, promising to return for them, pushed off, and soon had his boat load safe upon the Rhode Is-

Both houses have been having a long pull, if not a strong one, at the political resolutions which had accumulated during ine session, and accomplished nothing except the Assembly endorsing the President's emancipation proclamation by a vote of 46 to 22. That body devoted the whole of Wednesday to the business, and ran a night session into the small hours of the morning.

Yesterday, in the Senate, Sens. Thorp and West submitted a minority report in favor of giving farm mortgagors additional redress in the courts-authorising suits against unknown owners to compel the canceling of mortgages fraudulently obtained. The resolution providing for amending the constitution, so as to give a salary of $300 to members of the legislature instead of a per diem, was indefinitely postponed.

In the Assembly, Mr. Walworth introduced a bill to provide for and prescribe the compensation of county treasurers, and several local bills were passed. There was another "hug" at political questions.

A TEST VOTE .- In the Ohio house of representatives, on the 2d inst., the followug resolution was passed:

" That while we will not interfere with nor impair any right or institution of these revolted states, we will not hold the chattel property of rebel citizens exempt from the burthens and consequences of their great crimes; but when its sacrifice is necessary for the accomplishment of the foregoing phiecis, it ought to be made, for when the alternative is the overthrow of the government or the sacrifice of rebel property, we are unfalteringly for the maintenance of the government and the preservation of the

The rams had the advantage on their side, the Indianola moving very slowly as compared with them. They butted her in broad-side and stern. The Indianola continued to change guns from side to side, but the assailants as quickly gained the opposite side of her and butted again and again. The coal barges on each side of the Indianola quickly sunk. At last Capt. Brown appeared, announcing that his ship was sinking and surrendered. The boat was ordered ashore, and she was landed. All of the crew were taken but one man, who amped upon land and made his way to the federal lines, and made known the catastrophe. The action lasted fifteen minites. Since the loss of the Indianola the Frolic, in charge of Major Hays, asked permission to approach Vicksburg with permission to approach prisoners for exchange. He stated that the Indianola was sunk, but many seemed to doubt the statement, thinking it only ruse, and that the Indianola and Queen

When the last boat came up from Young's Point the Queen of the West was lying under the guns of the confederate battery at Warrenton, below Vicksburg.

COMIC BIOGRAPHY OF THE LATE.

Who Dies Aged 64 Tears and worth Ten Millions of Dollars, INTRODUCTION.

Why should people-live humans-cry when a man dies, or laugh when he is born, when both happen to one male baby? He enters the world on the same footing with all other male babies. He takes the equal boats are due from Memphis, but only the chances of life or death—of being poor—Tycoon has arrived. The Belle, Memphis, or of being rich—of going in a pine box to Potter's Field, or in a Rosewood coffin with silver mountings, to Greenwood-having stopped for a few hours in lofty Trinity to hear chanting in B minor, and the priests in their robes saying "Amen." Men's lives are written, and why not with comic pen? Why handle a subject seriously that is comical of itself? Why should miles below Vicksburg on Tuesday last, a milliner, or an artist, or a comic actor be when the rams Qasen and Webb approach serious? A man died last week who was 84 years old. He became a subject of death. - He is now our subject, and his body is subject to a lot of fine old worms that hold high feasts, day and night, down at Green wood, His christian name was Stephen, and his surname was Whitney-combined, it spells. Stephen Whitney.'

CHAPTER 1. A few days after independence war, de clared in the double hot summer of 1776, a rookery stood by the wayside in an old town of the east. It had two rooms. In one room a woman lay weak and sick. She had become a mother to a child, a male baby. It had no life, or seemed to have none; the doctor, worthy and shrewd man, hit it a slap on the back and knocked breath into it, and laid it full of life on the three-legged wooden stool. Then came a feeble wail-the first cry of a child. That was the first noise that our Stephen

The constitution has been adopted some three years; and George Washington is the lirst president of the United States; when a pale faced, sickly boy may be seen with a agged pair of pants, no vest, and a coat, he tail of which reaches down in two swallow's points to the calves of its wearer's legs. "Most likely," says Broadcloth. Will he grow up—be rich—own whole blocks of stone houses and fleets of ships? "It may be," says the the hopeful Irish woman, who is selling apples and nuts, and watching the quiet motions of that boy, who is only fourteen years old, but whose name is Stephen Whitney. The year is 1783. CHAPTER III.

Notice crowds looking at a bulletin in front of the Gazette office in Hanover Square; a young man was in the crowd— pale, thin but intelligent. He walks mu-singly down the slip; be has read of anoth-er battle of the great Napoleon of Austeritz; he reaches a store; it is a well to do grocery; he owns it; he has one clerk, whose name is John ; over the door is a sign read it—"S. Whitney." The owner is a middle aged man; he is 30 years of age, he is married—has children. "John, su gar must rise; I have bought it in time, and my note is as good as gold, all that is in first hands in the market. Be quiet, John -be calm." Ere a month passed, sugar commenced going up-Napolecn's wars were long ones—until that long head—the same that was on the stool where he uttered his first cry—the same that had landed ragged, almost a hatless and helpless boy, is New York—the grocer well-to-do in the world-the sugar speculator on war news. has cleared his hundred thousand dollars!

small city then-it was 1809. CHAPTER IV. Then grocer, Whitney, was doing a tre-mendous business; he had erected a large store in Front street between Old and Coen ties Slips. What a comic grocer! He had invested $50,000 in real estate in 1809-in houses that paid rent. He had sold goods to the southen people; he agreed to take cotton rated at five or six ceats per pound; Whitney, our comic grocer, was deemed a good accommodating man to receive it at those prices? War closed-cot on went up to seventeen cents. Fifty dol lars a bale was what Whitney made, and he had in his Front street store 8,000 bales only $40,000-cleared by our hero-man, at one dash! How the cash, the bank notes, went into real estate, into houses, stores; farms up on the Island.

Acres upon acres became his. He economized, sturved himself, refused to let his boys spend money -- why should they? " It my boys spend it, it is gone, and the interest s gone too; while if I save it to invest, it is eggs batching, chickens growing and layng eggs to hatch usain.

Eleven more years are passed. Our comic mas is a millionaire, yet he is the naked buby that cried only when the doc tor knocked breath into its little puny body as it lay on the three cornered wooden stool-the same prudent boy that munched bread in Old Slip, with a swallow-tailed coat and napless hat. He is the grover of years ago-the comic man who took cotton for debts of money due him. It is the rich millionaire, Stephen Whitney, who every body bows to, who is received with smiles when he goes on 'Change, and is permitted to frown himself. The year in 1820. CHAPTER Y.

The great millionsire is sought after by all who have projects in their heads but no money in their pockets. He, too, has a weakness. He has been a grocer—he de sires to be a large shipping merchant. Old Bobby Kermit determines to accommodate him. Kermit has a line of packets to Livrpool in his brain. He owns one ship, a saint ship, the "St. George." Yorker does not remember him? He coaxe in Stephen Whitney to baild the "St. Andrew," another ship, that cost alone $107,000. Stephen owns the largest share of a dozen ships. He has mortgages on others. He coins money. His boys bother him. Why should they be so anxious to spend money, when he can invest money every hour of his life so judiciously, and where it shall pay such good interest? He is an injured father. He wont stand it. He has just invested a million in the New Jersey transportation and ferry boat stock, and needs all his money. What a comic What a comic biography, his work! man? Yet, he is the same hig lot of clay that was once that little baby that had not breath and lay naked on a three cornered wooden stool, when the doctor hit baby on the back and knocked breath into him. He is the same old boy that once was young, and entered the city penniless, with a swallew tailed coat, a napless hat, and eating a great chunk of bread—all to his own share. He is now worth two millions, and it is the year of our Lord 1835, only.

CHAPTER VI. A quarter of a century rolls slong, and our comic millionaire is coining, hoarding, increasing, adding, multiplying, doubling, compounding interest upon interest, all these long years.

Real estate increases in its value a hundred fold, his houses multiply in every ward, his boats cross the ferries, stocks in bank, insurance, state and United States stocks get into his iron safes and coffers by wheel barrow and cart loads, and the comic bu-man heart contracts as his vast wealth expands and increases.

Now this care-worn, pallid-faced, skin, bone and body is eighty-four years old! A friend calls to collect money towards electing a mayor. "Money I will not give," says our comic millionaire, "but I will sit up all night and fold tickets for you."

That funny fellow, Death, was preparing his ticket—a free ticket—a ticket over the only ferry that costs its holder nothing.

It is morn, a man lies gasping on a hed of downy feathers-his eyes are set. He lives, but can't last long. A relative asks him, " Is there any request yet unspoken ?" The comic mac, who is about to die, is weak. He bends the other's face to him. Yes, don't pay the $500 to bury me in Trinity church yard. Foolish expensebetter buy stock in the Panama railroad with the money." And then he died.

At night, two old cronies strip the comic man that was a millionaire. He is nothing but skin and bones now. They lay him naked on a pine board. It is eighty-four years since he was laid a baba upon a wooden stool, when the kind doctor knocked breath into him. Yet he is the poor boy that landed penniless in New York, will long swallow coat tail and a napless hat. He is the grocer, the speculator, the cotton purchaser, the ship owner, the man worth not one, but ten millions of dollars.

ALL SORTS OF PARAGRAPHS.

There are worse ways to raise money than to raise a one dollar bill to a ten, or a hundred. Robert Small, the famous negro pilot who brought the Pianter out of Charleston harbor, says that 6,000 negroes are behind the batteries at Savannah, and 10,000 in and around the forts of Charleston. He believes that in ten days he can raise a force of 10,000 loyal blacks to fight for the Union.

GONE TO NEW ENGLAND,-Mr. Montgomery late editor of the Vicksburg Whig, has gone to New England, to fill a series of appointments he has there. He hopes, how ever, to return to this state at no distant

THE SMALL CHANGE.—It is officially aunounced that the proper depositories now have an abundant supply of postal currency, and will bereafter be able to meet all demands. Over lifteen millions of dullars are already in circulation, and the manufacture is going on at the rate of a million every five days.

The conscription bill passed the senate without opposition. How this happened, while it was so hitterly opposed by democrats in the lower house, let the Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette tell:

A democratic senstor-one of those who took their novitiate for senatorial bonors in the cells of Fort Lafayette-gave a solu tion of the mystery to-day, so terse and true as to deserve a repetition. "Four of our men"-and he named them, but of course I couldn't be guilty of such disre spect to American senators -" four of our men were so drunk they couldn't leave their rooms; and the others, not knowing bow drunk these men were, had gone off to Count Mercier's party." That is the whole story. It may not improperly be added that the west was not without its fair repre sentation in the drunken quartette.

T. W. Brown will address the Union Club and the people of this vicinity, Friday Evening, March 6th, at Lappin's Hall, 71 o'clock. Subject-"Shall the Nation Live."

Ladies and citizens generally are invited to attend.

Union Club Meeting.

At the meeting of the Union Club, last evening, it was decided to rent rooms in the upper story of Pease's new block, and open a reading room. The library of the Mechanics' Association will be placed in the reading room, and it will be well supplied with the leading republican newspapers of the day. The following committees were appointed to obtain subscriptions to support the reading room and aid the general committee, Mesers. Jas. Sutherland, J. M. Burgess, S. J. M. Putnan and S. A.

Hudson, previously appointed: First Ward .- R. B. Treat. Second Ward .-

Third Ward .- B. B. Eldredge. Fourth Ward .- H. N. Comstock and Obed Daun.

The benefits of such a room, which will offer a pleasant place of resort for friends and afford the means of acquiring the current information of the day, must be apparent to all, and we hope such a response will be made by the loyal men of the city as will evidence a deep interest in its success and an earnest desire to secure its benefits. When the country calls, let its true friends be active.

The regular weekly meetings of the club, which occur Mouday evening, will be held at the rooms now engaged by the club, unless notice is otherwise given. They should be generally attended, not only as a privilege but a duty.

Information Wanted.

Mrs. Sarah Gordon, of Lexington, Mo., is now in this city with two children, and wishes information of Mr. John Tucker or Win. Gordon. Mrs. Gordon's husband was a Missouri Unionist, and in Mulligan's brigade at the battle of Lexington. He was killed in that battle, and his widow has since been despoiled of all his property by the secessionists. She is now in search of her nucle, John Tucker, or her brother inlaw, Wm. Gordon. Mr. Tucker left Obio ten or twelve years ago, and came to Wisconsin. Mrs. G. thinks to Rock county. Her brother in law, Wm. Gordon, left Missouri last summer to find her uncle. Mrs. Gordon is in destitute circumstances, and one of her children is suffering severely from an attack of diptheria. Any information of either Mr. Tucker or Mr. Gordon will be thankfully received, and, may be addressed to Volney Atwood, of this city. secture To-Night.

The lecturer before the Union Clbb tonight is THURLOW WEED BROWS. Many of our citizens have heard him speak on consequently it will be of no use for merchants buying their goods now to temperance and on political topics, and they will need no endorsement of his talents and popularity as a public speaker. To those who have not heard him, it may be proper to say that he is a man of rare abilities, a pleasing speaker, and will deliver a lecture well worth listening to.

We have made tho above Reduction in Prices with the two-fold view of benefitting the public and ourselves. The public have been swindled by spurious machines made in imitation of ours. The metal in them, from the tron casting to the smallest piece, is of poor quality. Their makers have not the means to dotheir work well. They are hid away in secret places, where it would be impossible to have at their command the proper mechanical appliances. It is only by doing a great business, and having extensive manufacturing stabilishments, that good machines can be madent needentered aways in blo to get our of order, and are sure to our constituable to get our of order, and are sure to our constituable to get out of order, and are sure to our constituable to make and money to keep them in repair. The qualities to be blooked for in a machine are: eerstainly of correct action at all raties of species, semilisticy of construction, great durability and rapidity of operation, with the teast tabor. Machines to combine these essential qualities, must be made of the best metal and finished to profession. We have the ways and means, on a grand acade, to do this.

The purchasers of machines, whose daily bread it may concern, will fant that those baving the chore qualities not only work well at rapid as well as alow rates of spond, but lead long in the finest possible working order. Our machines as after.
